NEP SAARTHI

Annual Report 2024-25

NEP Saarthi, Bharati College, has been instrumental in promoting awareness and understanding of the National Education Policy (NEP) through a variety of activities conducted in 2024. These initiatives aimed to educate and engage participants on the policy's objectives and its transformative potential. Below is a summary of the key activities conducted across different months.

In April, NEP Saarthi held a comprehensive NEP Lecture designed to introduce the attendees to the main objectives and goals of the National Education Policy. This event was crucial in familiarizing participants with the fundamental changes that NEP brings to India's education system, including the shift towards holistic education, interdisciplinary learning, and the incorporation of new pedagogies. The lecture saw active participation, and the attendees, including students and faculty members, were able to ask questions and engage in meaningful discussions. The session not only increased awareness but also motivated individuals to think critically about how NEP would affect education in India and their role in its implementation. Additionally, NEP Saarthi installed an NEP photo booth on the college campus. This creative addition served as an interactive way to draw attention to the policy. The booth featured informative posters, key highlights of NEP, and a space for students to click photos and share their support for the initiative on social media, thereby amplifying its outreach.

Moving to August, NEP Saarthi organized a workshop on NEP Awareness at Sarvodaya Bal Vidyalaya, a school that caters to students from various backgrounds. This workshop was a hands-on approach to understanding NEP, and it involved a range of interactive sessions that were designed to simplify complex topics in the policy. Through presentations, group discussions, and activities, the participants gained a deeper understanding of NEP's vision and its implications on the educational landscape. The workshop also provided a platform for teachers and students to discuss the challenges and opportunities that NEP presents, as well as ways to effectively integrate these changes into the existing education system. The workshop was a significant step in ensuring that NEP's benefits were accessible to a wider audience, especially those in the grassroots education sector.

In September, NEP Saarthi facilitated a group discussion on NEP and its future possibilities, bringing together students, educators, and stakeholders from the Bharati College community. The discussion served as an open platform for participants to express their views and concerns regarding NEP's implementation and its potential for reshaping India's education system. Topics of conversation included the feasibility of integrating NEP at the local level, the policy's focus on skills development, and the necessary reforms required for successful implementation. The group discussion was particularly focused on exploring the long-term impact of NEP and how it can be adapted to suit various educational contexts across the country. The session encouraged critical thinking and collaboration, giving attendees a chance to reflect on their own educational journeys and envision how NEP could improve learning outcomes in the future.

In October, NEP Saarthi took a more creative approach to spread awareness by organizing a nukkad natak (street play) to engage the public in a more informal and impactful manner. The performance, conducted by the Manthan: The Natak Society of Bharati College. This street play was staged in different community spaces, reaching a diverse audience beyond the academic setting. Through the power of drama and street theater, the play dramatized the key elements of NEP, addressing its core message about educational reforms, student-centered learning, and the importance of inclusivity in education. The use of street theater was especially effective in reaching individuals who might not have been engaged in formal workshops or lectures but were still able to connect with the message through the creative medium of performance. Throughout 2024, NEP Saarthi, Bharati College, has successfully carried out a range of activities that have contributed to enhancing awareness and understanding of the National Education Policy. These events have not only educated participants about the principles of NEP but have also provided platforms for dialogue, discussion, and creative expression. As we move forward, NEP Saarthi is committed to continuing its efforts to raise awareness about NEP, furthering its integration into educational practices, and ensuring its benefits are accessible to all. The activities held in April, August, September, and November have demonstrated the power of knowledge-sharing and collaboration in creating a more informed and empowered community that is ready to support the implementation of NEP in India.
